

- What body kits are currently available for the Hyundai Tiburon?
There are a lot of choices for both the 1st Gen (97-99), 2nd Gen (00-01) and 3rd Gen (03+). Make sure you get a specific set to your car. There are some universal pieces though. Spoilers may be able to fit both, and the turbulence, and most other side skirts fit Gen1 and Gen2 applications. SharkRacing Z shark fenders also apply to both Gen1 and Gen2. the list below is divided by Manufacturer/Distributor:

- What else could I add to the bodywork of my Tiburon?

Well, don't forget a list of things. You have a rear window spoiler, you have front side flaps, you can have a paint shop take your hood and create a heat extractor or a hood scoop, as well as getting shark fenders and putting them right into your quarter panels. There are even ways to convert a 1st generation Tiburon, to have the hood and lights of the 2nd generation. This has been done many times in Korea, but no one seems to have attempted it yet in the states.

- How do I paint my body kit?
You could get some factory paint and paint the application yourself if you feel comfortable doing so or have experience with painting. Another section covers this. I would recommend taking the car and the kit to a professional and getting several estimates, as well as taking care to their experience and professionalism. Some may say you get what you pay for, and you will probably want the color to match up perfect as though the car has never been painted, and that is just simply what it looks like
- What finishing touches should I add to my body kit?
Some people top them off with a set of altezza lights, clear corners, and possibly graphics. Body graphics or windshield banners, etc. Although I finished my car at one point with a shark fin smack dab in the hood, I wouldn't recommend that to anyone that isn't a very light hearted person :-). Also an idea for those repainting their whole car is to mold the pieces together. A body shop should be able to help you with this. This creates a smooth appearance. All the pieces are molded together and painted, for a sharp clean look. Check other faqs on shaving handles, emblems, corners, door openings etc. All of these can also be applied to the body to give it a unique appearance as well as show car features.
- All the kits are ugly, what am I supposed to do?
People have their opinions. If you don't like a kit, check out more. There are a lot of places offering them. Something you can do is a combination of pieces. You could get a front bumper, side skirts, rear window spoiler and a rear spoiler, and it will be totally unique. If you could split a kit, there are even more options available. it's your car, you do what you like, with your pocket book, and probably your wife, as your guide.
